This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

+ Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.

+ Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.

+ Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

INTRODUCTION

The collections of the Detroit Museum of Art were recently conveyed to the Arts Commission of the City of Detroit, and form the nucleus around which the Detroit Institute of Arts will be built.

These collections had their first great impetus in 1889, when James E. Scripps, one of the founders of the Museum, presented over seventy pictures by Italian, Spanish, Flemish, Dutch, and French artists of the XV to the XVIII Centuries. This gift places the collections of the Detroit Institute of Arts in an enviable position among American museums for the breadth and character of its collections, in which may be traced almost every influence of Renaissance art.

Speaking of his own benefaction at the time it was made, some forty years ago, Mr. Scripps said:

> "As a journalist, it had been my lot, on frequent occasions, to urge upon those who should have accumulated more than the average share of wealth, the duty and wisdom of employing a part at least of their surplus in public benefactions. As my own circumstances bettered, it was impossible with consistency to do otherwise than follow my precept by practical example.
> "The most promising field for a public benefaction seemed to be in the establishment of an art institute, which should at once afford elevated amusement to the people, and the means for an education in art for those who would enter upon it as a profession. This field I long since marked out for myself, believing it would prove a useful one, and one that might contribute materially to the aggrandizement of our beautiful city.
> "Such were my aspirations for our good city when, in 1885, through the energy and liberality of others, the Detroit Museum of Art came into existence. The grounds and building being provided for by popular subscription, the opportunity appeared for carrying out my long-cherished plans, and I at once set about forming for it the nucleus of a collection of pictures. My attention was directed to the field of the old masters for the following reasons: (1) From having for some years been a collector of the etched and engraved works of the old masters, I possessed some slight acquaintance with the field. (2) It was a field which, in the prevailing rage for modern pictures, would not be likely to be taken up by any other beneficiaries of the Museum. (3) It was not difficult to see that it was the cities which possessed the choicest collections of the works of the great masters of the past that were the favored resorts of artists and art students. It was largely by the study of these old masters that great modern painters were developed; a collection of their works, therefore, seemed almost indispensable, if Detroit would become a center of art education. (4) No public gallery in this country had as yet made any considerable start in acquiring a collection of old masters. A field for pre-eminence was, therefore, open to the Detroit Museum in that direction, which in the line of modern pictures could only have been attained at the cost of a large fortune. (5) There appeared to me to be an element of permanent value in old masters, which modern pictures might not possess, an opinion which was strengthened by a private letter received in 1885 from Mr. Charles B. Curtis, of New York, in which the following passage occurred: 'I am glad to be assured that there are some men in this new country, who are capable of appreciating the works of the old masters, and who buy them in preference to the productions of the modern school. At present the fashion sets towards the style of Diaz and Bouguereau. How long this may last we cannot tell. He would be a bold man who should undertake to prophesy what will be the status of these men a hundred years hence. But Murillo and Claude have lasted two centuries with increasing fame. We may safely trust, therefore, that they will continue to shine far into the future.' (6) Every year old pictures are becoming scarcer in the market, and every year that the beginning of our collection was postponed, made it the more difficult of accomplishment.

"With these convictions I began work on this nucleus for a collection (for it can really only be considered a beginning of what Detroit in a few years may possess), and for the past two years (1887 to 1888) have made it almost my sole occupation. I have in that time visited and studied over forty of the principal picture galleries of Europe, have probed the various markets, and have expended between $75,000 and $80,000 in purchases.

"This labor and expenditure has been undertaken with the full knowledge that my work will probably not immediately be appreciated, but in the fullest confidence that the future will recognize its wisdom and foresight.

"In forming this collection the usual collectors' plan has been pursued, of securing first the more readily attainable works, instead of seeking for masterpieces and rarities. Such will naturally come in time. Meanwhile I have sought mainly for good examples of the works of the masters such as are comparatively plentiful in the market. Of this class are many of the Dutch masters of the XVII Century, pictures by whom constitute nearly half of this collection. But these I have happily been able to supplement by a few truly great works."

The desire of Mr. Scripps to safeguard the Museum from the hasty acceptance of pictures which might later be regarded as unworthy a place in the collection, is seen in the following letter addressed to the acting president of the Museum at that time:

"Honorable James McMillan, Vice-President, Detroit Museum of Art.

"Dear Sir: As you are aware, I have spent the principal portion of my time for two years past, and some $75,000 or $80,000 in cash, in forming a collection of pictures by the old masters for presentation to the city of Detroit, as represented by the Museum of Art. The works are now on their way to the city. They number about eighty pieces in all, some very valuable, others of trifling worth. From the whole I think as many as fifty works could be selected, which would be of permanent value to the Museum.

"I propose that the Trustees give me the use of a gallery for the exhibition of the collection, during the course of which exhibition the Trustees, through any committee or other agency they may determine upon, shall with care and deliberation proceed to select the best fifty—if they shall find so many that are desirable—when I will make formal conveyance of the same to the Institution.

"My purpose in limiting the number is to guard against the walls of the Museum being cumbered with anything which later on may become undesirable property, and I am importing the pictures in my own name, in order that the cullings, or those that may be regarded as of little or no value, may be left on my hands, without embarrassment to any one.

Very truly yours,

James E. Scripps."

Seventy-two of the pictures were accepted by the Trustees.

In 1909, after the death of Mr. Scripps, his wife, Mrs. Harriet J. Scripps, tendered as a gift fifteen additional paintings, which happily augment the collection.

She also presented as a further memorial to her husband his large collection of prints and drawings, numbering about twelve hundred and eighty, which are catalogued elsewhere, and which she felt could best serve their purpose by being intrusted to the Institution, to the inception of which Mr. Scripps gave so much of his time and thought.

Mr. Edward Chandler Walker, who was President of the Museum in 1907 and 1908, followed with keen interest the work of the Museum and contributed materially toward its collections. The Museum is chiefly indebted to him for a group of four paintings by Detroit's distinguished artist, Gari Melchers, consisting of "The Fencing Master," "The Wedding," "Portrait of Ik Marvel," and the "Portrait of Mrs. Melchers." His gift also includes fine examples of Isabey, John Hoppner, Constant Troyon, Mary Cassatt, and others. He also gave substantial support to other museum projects, being one of the largest contributors toward the new Museum site, and at his death left a bequest of twenty-five thousand dollars.

Mr. Charles Willis Ward, who became a member of the corporation in 1909, presented a group of paintings including examples of Josef Israels, Constant Troyon, William A. Bouguereau, Willard L. Metcalf, Edward W. Redfield, E. Irving Couse, and Robert Hopkin.

Mr. D. M. Ferry, Jr., who was President of the Museum, 1913 to 1918, and his sister, Mrs. Queene Ferry Coonley, presented jointly a group of nine pictures from the D. M. Ferry collection, consisting of examples of Rosa Bonheur, Émile Van Marcke, Eugéne Isabey, Alma-Tadema, Josef Israels, Adolph Schreyer, Léon Perrault, Jean Aubert and Narcisse Virgilio Diaz de la Peña.

The income from the bequests of Mr. William C. Yawkey of five thousand dollars, Miss Octavia W. Bates of seven thousand dollars, Mrs. Lizzie Merrill Palmer of ten thousand dollars, and of Elliott T. Slocum of two thousand dollars has enabled the Museum to acquire some works of art by contemporary painters and sculptors, but most of the collection of modern paintings and some of the sculpture have been purchased by popular subscription.

In 1905 the Museum set out to secure annual contributions to a picture fund, and this was continued over a period of years, with the result that the Museum has been enabled to bring together the nucleus of a collection of contemporary art, mostly by American artists. In 1914, through an action of the Board of Trustees, these contributors to the picture fund became annual and sustaining members of the corporation, the membership fees continuing to be used largely for the same purpose.

Mr. George G. Booth, elected a member of the Detroit Museum of Art in 1900, has always shown a keen interest in the affairs of the Museum. His gift of a collection of artistic handicraft in 1919, consisting of over one thousand objects, mostly by American craftsmen, is one of the most significant contributions the Museum has received.

With some modifications, the excellent catalogue of the earlier paintings, compiled by Mr. Scripps at the time of his gift, has been used as a basis of the present catalogue.

The Arts Commission acknowledges its indebtedness to Bernard Berenson, Dr. A. Bredius, late Director and at present Advisor of the Royal Picture Gallery at The Hague, Dr. J. O. Kronig, late Director of the Frans Hals Museum at Haarlem, and Professor Chandler R. Post, of Harvard, for their ascriptions on some of the paintings.

The present catalogue does not include all of the departments of the Museum. The prints, the Egyptian and Oriental collections and other departments will be catalogued separately.

In the arrangement of the catalogue the names of the artists are listed alphabetically under countries, except that the miscellaneous XIX Century paintings, which are not numerous enough to justify this arrangement, have been put in a chapter by themselves.

No. 9. ANTONIO CANALE
View of Venice from St. Mark's Quay

ITALIAN PAINTING

AGOSTINI, GIOVANNI PAOLO DE.
Worked between 1510 and 1520. Milanese School.

1. DOUBLE PORTRAIT OF AN ITALIAN NOBLEMAN AND HIS WIFE.

   Was attributed to Giovanni Bellini when purchased. The above ascription to Giovanni Paolo de Agostini is made by Bernard Berenson, in an article on this picture in the "Rassegna d' Arte" for April, 1916. He deciphers the inscription at the top as "Ioanis Paulus De Augustinis," the painter's signature.

   Canvas: h. 15 in., w. 21⅞ in. From the collection of Henry Wilkinson of Enfield, England.

   Presented by Mr. James E. Scripps.

AGNOLO, ANDREA D', called ANDREA DEL SARTO. 1487-1531. Florentine School.

2. THE DEPOSITION OF CHRIST.

   Wood: h. 28¾ in., w. 24 in. This painting is either a study for the larger one of the same subject, No. 58, in the Pitti Palace gallery at Florence, or is a copy by one of Del Sarto's pupils. A change in the color of the dress of the woman at the Savior's feet leads to the inference that it is not a copy, but really a work of the master's own hand.

   Presented by Mr. James E. Scripps.

ALBANO, FRANCESCO.
1578-1660. School of Bologna.

3. THE IMMACULATE CONCEPTION.

(See remarks on the doctrine of the Immaculate Conception in connection with No. 88, of this catalogue.)

Canvas: h. 37 in., w. 28½ in. Formerly in the Duke of Modena's collection.

Presented by Mr. James E. Scripps.

ALLEGRI, ANTONIO, called CORREGGIO.
1494-1534. School of Parma.

4. ANGEL HEADS.

Study for the dome of the cathedral at Parma. The figure at the left looks as if intended for a young John the Baptist.

Canvas: octagonal, h. 23 in., w. 23 in. From the collection of W. H. Aspinwall, of New York.

Presented by Mr. James E. Scripps.

5. THE VIRGIN AND CHILD.

Panel: h. 12⅞ in., w. 9¾ in. This picture is an exact replica of a similar subject in the National Gallery, London, even to size. It was in the possession of Dr. Hinde, lecturer at the University College Hospital, London. Sir Charles Eastlake, president of the Royal Academy, and English editor of Kugler's Handbook of Paintings of the Italian School, who was a frequent visitor at Dr. Hinde's, believed it to be a genuine work of Correggio.

Presented by Mr. James E. Scripps.

No. 11. CIMA DA CONEGLIANO
The Madonna and Infant Savior

BAGNACAVALLO, see RAMENGHI, BARTOLOMMEO.

BARBIERI, GIOVANNI FRANCESCO, called GUERCINO. 1591-1666. School of Bologna.

6. THE ERYTHRAEAN SIBYL.

A long tablet, or book of wax tablets, is inscribed with the title, "JVDICIJ SIGNUM TELLUS SUDORE MADESCET," and at the foot the words "Sibij Erithraea," the literal translation being "The sign of judgment, the earth shall be moistened with sweat," with the name of the Sibyl.

The Sibyls were prophetesses who foretold the coming of Christ to the Gentiles, as the prophets did to the Jews. They were regarded as holy virgins, who lived in caves and grottoes, with power to read the future. Varro, who wrote 100 years before Christ, gives their number as ten, and their names are taken from the location of their habitation. The Sibyl Erythraea was the prophetess of Divine vengeance. She predicted the Trojan war, in which character she holds a naked sword. But she also foretold the annunciation and in this representation she has a white rose.

Canvas: h. 44¾ in., w. 60½ in. Formerly in the Memorial Palace at Pisa; later in the collection of W. H. Aspinwall, of New York.

Presented by Mr. James E. Scripps.

BIGI, FRANCESCO, called FRANCIABIGIO.
1482-1525. Florentine School.

7. PORTRAIT OF A MAN.

Was attributed to Masaccio when purchased. The above ascription to Franciabigio is made by Bernard Berenson.

Wood: h. 15½ in., w. 11¾ in. From the collection of the Marchese Caruana of Florence.

Presented by Mr. James E. Scripps.

BYZANTINE SCHOOL. XIII Century.

The artists of Constantinople, driven to seek new fields by the opposition to pictures inculcated by the Greek Church, found an asylum in the monasteries of Italy, where they pursued their art. From this beginning sprang the famous revival of art in Italy which culminated in the XV Century. These Byzantine paintings are always on wood, usually cut to a convex surface, and are always on a gold ground.

8. ST. MERCURIUS.

Wood: h. 8⅜ in., w. 6⅜ in.

Presented by Mr. James E. Scripps.

CANALE, ANTONIO, called CANALETTO.
1697-1768. Venetian School.

9. VIEW OF VENICE FROM ST. MARK'S QUAY.

To the right, the palace of the Doges; to the left, the church of Santa Maria della Salute.

Canvas: h. 45 in., w. 46¾ in.

The Virgin Adoring the Infant Savior

CARRACCI, ANNIBALE. 1560-1609.
School of Bologna.

10. THE TRIUMPH OF GALATEA.

A replica in oil of one of the Farnesina frescoes. Canvas: h. 29 in., w. 53 in. From the Duke of Lucca's collection, sold in London, 1841.

Presented by Mr. James E. Scripps.

CIMA DA CONEGLIANO, GIOVANNI BATTISTA. 1460 (?)-1517. Venetian School.

11. THE MADONNA AND INFANT SAVIOR.

Bernard Berenson says this is the earliest painting by Cima which he has come across in America, a very early work—about 1488—because "never again is Cima at once so Antonellesque and Bellinesque." "The sculptural compactness—, the pyramidal mass of the two figures, the conical effect of the Virgin alone betray the strong influence of Antonello, while the type and action of the Child and the feeling of the whole bear witness no less to contact with Bellini." (Berenson: "Venetian Painting in America—the Fifteenth Century.")

Wood: h. 25¾ in., w. 19 in. Signed at the right, "Joannes Bta. Coneglanesis." From the collections successively of M. de Bammeville, Rev. W. Davenport-Bromley, and Mrs. Sloane Stanley of London.

Presented by Mr. James E. Scripps.

CORNETO, MONALDUS DA. Umbrian School.

12. THE MARRIAGE OF THE VIRGIN.

Was attributed to Pinturicchio when purchased. The above ascription to Monaldus da Corneto, of the school of Perugino, is made by Bernard Berenson.

According to the legend, when Mary was fourteen years old an angel instructed the priest Zacharias to call together all the widowers among the people and require each to bring his rod. The several rods were deposited in the temple over night, and next morning that of Joseph was found to have budded and flowered. He was accordingly assigned as the husband of Mary and all the others broke their rods in despair.

Canvas: h. 24¼ in., w. 40¼ in.

Presented by Mr. James E. Scripps.

14. THE VIRGIN ADORING THE INFANT SAVIOR.

Was attributed to Alessio Baldovinetti when purchased. The above ascription to Pier Francesco Fiorentino has been made by such critics as Seymour de Ricci and Professor Chandler R. Post.

Wood: arched, h. 28¾ in., w. 16 in. From the collection of the Tassi family, Florence.

Presented by Mr. James E. Scripps.

17. THE CRUCIFIXION.

Wood: arched, h. 35 in., w. 21 in. Painted on gesso or a preparation of plaster anciently used as a groundwork for the colors. Probably a small altarpiece of the XV Century or earlier. From the Stowe House Sale, 1848.

Presented by Mrs. Harriet J. Scripps.

ITALIAN (NORTH) SCHOOL. About 1700.

18. THE SPIRITUAL BETROTHAL OF ST. CATHERINE OF ALEXANDRIA WITH THE INFANT JESUS.

Representing symbolically the mystic union between Christ and the Church. St. Catherine, according to the legend, was an Egyptian princess of great beauty and learning, who lived in the third century. When fourteen years of age, at the death of her father, she became queen.

Canvas: h. 36 in., w. 51 in.

In 1883, when preparations were making for the art loan exhibition of that year, Richard Storrs Willis, through clerical friends, solicited of His Holiness Pope Leo XIII, the contribution of a picture from the Vatican. In response this one was received with the Pope's blessing. The Detroit Museum of Art was the outgrowth of that exhibition and thus came into possession of the picture.

No. 21. ALEGRETTO NUZI
A Triptych Altarpiece

MARATTA, CARLO. 1652-1713. Roman School.

19. THE VIRGIN AND CHILD AND ST. JOHN.

Copper: h. 34¼ in., w. 26½ in. Formerly the property of Prince di Gonzaga.

Presented by Mr. James E. Scripps.

MASTER OF THE SAN MINIATO ALTARPIECE, THE. XV Century. Florentine School.

A master whose personality has lately been discovered. A pupil of Fra Filippo Lippi (1405–1469). Two other examples of his work are in this country, one in the Minneapolis Institute of Arts, the other in the Johnston Collection, Philadelphia.

20. THE VIRGIN AND CHILD.

Was attributed to Fra Filippo Lippi when purchased. The above ascription to The Master of of the San Miniato Altarpiece is made by Bernard Berenson.

Wood: arched, h. 19½ in., w. 14 in. Purchased of Luigi Pisani of Florence.

Presented by Mr. James E. Scripps.

NUZI, ALEGRETTO. Worked between 1360 and 1385. Florentine School.

21. A Triptych Altarpiece.

Central panel: the Virgin and Child enthroned with John the Baptist and St. Catherine. Left wing: the Nativity. Right wing: the Crucifixion.

Was attributed to Giotto when purchased. The above ascription to Alegretto Nuzi is made by Bernard Berenson in his "Central Italian Painters of the Renaissance."

"The feminine saint at the left, in the absence of any more definite attributes than the book of pious wisdom, the conventionalized martyr's palm and the princess's crown, we may conjecture to be Catherine of Alexandria who was so prominent in the category of virgin saints that it was sometimes not thought necessary to distinguish her by her ordinary symbol, the wheel. A similar figure in the Berlin diptych by Alegretto Nuzi is identified in the catalogue as St. Catherine although she has no more attributes" than in this picture. (Professor C. R. Post in "Art in America" for August, 1915.)

Wood: central panel, h. 18⅝, w. 8¾ in. From the collection of the Marchese del Turco at Florence.

Presented by Mr. James E. Scripps.

No. 36. ALBERT CUYP
Landscape with Cattle

PANINI, GIOVANNI PAOLO. 1691 or 1695-1764.

22. A Ruined Triumphal Arch.

Presented by Mr. James E. Scripps.

PEDRINI, GIOVANNI, called GIAMPIETRINO. Early XV Century. Milanese School.

23. Salvator Mundi (The Savior of the World).

Was attributed to Leonardo da Vinci when purchased. The above ascription to Giampietrino is made by Bernard Berenson.

Wood: h. 26 in., w. 19 in. This picture is reputed to have belonged to the Kings of France down to the time of the Revolution of 1789. It was later purchased from a French gentleman by a Mr. Parke, who died in 1821, and in whose family it subsequently long remained. In 1889 it was sold at Christie's in London.

Presented by Mr. James E. Scripps.

RAMENGHI, BARTOLOMMEO, called
BAGNACAVALLO. 1484-1542. School of Bologna.

24. THE VIRGIN ENTHRONED WITH ST. AMADIO AND ST. ANTHONY.

St. Anthony of Egypt stands at the right of the picture with his traditional emblems, the crutch, the bell, the black pig, the fire and the Greek tau or T on his shoulder—the first letter of the word Theos, God. St. Amadio stands at the left in the robes of a bishop holding the model of a city in his gloved hands, which the Holy Child leans forward to bless. On the pedestal of the Virgin's throne is an inscription in Latin, the literal rendering of which is: "I, Peter Demeo, from Ceregia, had these figures made for my devotion on the last of November, 1529. Beneo. Ramenghi fecit." St. Anthony, surnamed the Great, was born in Egypt in 251 and died in 365. He was rich and educated, but gave all his property to the poor and retired to the desert, where he spent many years in ascetic solitude. He later organized a society of anchorites and thus became the founder of the monastic system. The crutch seen in his pictures symbolizes his age and feebleness, the bell his power to exorcise evil spirits; the pig represents the demon of sensuality which Anthony vanquished; the fire signifies his spiritual aid as patron saint against fire in all shapes, in the next world as well as in this.

Wood: h. 53 in., w. 44 in. From the collection of Giuseppi Placidi of Rome.

Presented by Mr. James E. Scripps.

SACCHI, ANDREA. 1594 (?)-1661. Roman School.

26. THE APPARITION OF THE VIRGIN TO ST. PHILIP BENOZZI.

St. Philip Beniti or Benozzi, the principal ornament and propagator of the religious order of the Servites in Italy, was a member of a noble Florentine family. Once at Mass he heard the words "Draw near and join thyself to the chariot" read in the epistle of the day. Applying them to himself he considered it an invitation to put himself under the patronage of the Blessed Virgin in the order of the Servites. The following night he thought he beheld the Virgin seated in a chariot, calling him to this new order. He took the vows in 1233.

Canvas: h. 53½ in., w. 39 in. From the collection of the late Giuseppi Placidi of Rome.

Presented by Mr. James E. Scripps.

SALVI, GIOVANNI BATTISTA, called SASSOFERRATO. 1605-1685. Roman School.

Canvas: h. 29½ in., w. 23¾ in. Formerly in the Gillott collection, sold in 1872.

Presented by Mr. James E. Scripps.

28. THE CORONATION OF THE VIRGIN.

At the left is St. Peter with book and keys, and next him St. John the Baptist, with cross, scroll and garment of skins. On the right is St. Paul with sword and scroll, and by him another aged saint with small cross and book. Under the picture is the Latin inscription, "Veni de Libano . . . . Coronaberis," a quotation from the Vulgate, Canticle of Canticles, Chap. IV, ver. 8, translated, "Come from Libanus, thou shalt be crowned." On the predella or base, below the inscription, are Mary Magdalene, Christ rising from a sarcophagus, and the Virgin Mary.

DOU, GERARD. 1613-1675.

37. THE ANNUNCIATION.

Purchased of Charles Sedelmeyer of Paris, 1897, who said of it: "I think this picture can be ascribed to Gerard Dow when he worked in the studio of Rembrandt, although it differs from the artist's works of his later period. It is not so highly finished in details and is much more vigorous in effect and richer in tone. It has evidently been executed under Rembrandt's influence, and there are some paintings of Gerard Dow's early period which show the same qualities. The color of the dress of the Virgin is most characteristic of Dow. Dr. Bode and Dr. Julius Meyer of Berlin think also that it is possible that Dow painted this picture. It was in the Reimer collection and afterwards in that of Herr van Kauffman, Berlin." Dr. J. O. Kronig, late director of the Frans Hals Museum at Haarlem, believes it to be by Govaert Flinck (1615-1660).

RUBENS, PETER PAUL. 1577-1640.

75. ABIGAIL MEETING DAVID WITH PRESENTS.

Max Rooses, the great authority on the works of Rubens, was of the opinion that Rubens was aided in this work by his pupils, but that he himself put the finishing touches to the principal parts, especially the figures and the sky at the right. He observed that the outlines are clear and the tone warm. He judged the picture to have been painted about 1618, which was during Rubens's best period. He traced its history through the Duke of Richelieu, the Duke of Gramont (1715), Jacques Meyer of Rotterdam (1722), the Count of Plettenberg and Wittem (1788), and Paul Methuen (1830). At the sale of Methuen's pictures it brought 1,500 guineas ($7,700).

MURILLO, BARTOLOMÉ ESTÉBAN.
1617-1682.

88. THE IMMACULATE CONCEPTION.

Murillo's most famous pictures are his representations of the Immaculate Conception, so called, of which there are known to be twenty-five in existence, no two entirely alike. One of the best of these is in the Louvre, in Paris. In those in which the Virgin is represented with dark hair, the artist is said to have taken his daughter Francisca as a model.

The doctrine of the Immaculate Conception, or sinless nature of the Virgin Mary, was agitated as early as the V Century. In the XI Century it was proposed to make it an article of belief, but it was postponed through the influence of St. Bernard. In the XIII Century it was advocated by the learned Duns Scotus, but was successfully opposed by the great theologian, St. Thomas Aquinas. In 1615 the teaching of a contrary doctrine was prohibited by papal bull. About the same time Pacheco, a Spanish inquisitor and inspector of sacred pictures, laid down rules to be followed in pictorial representations of the dogma. The Virgin was to be portrayed in the bloom of youth, with all the beauty painting could express, her hands to be folded on her bosom or joined in prayer. She was to be surrounded by a flood of light with the moon under her feet; her robe to be of spotless white, and the mantle, or scarf, blue. Around her were to hover cherubs bearing roses, palms and lilies. Murillo did not always adhere rigidly to these rules, but his orthodoxy was never questioned.

Canvas: h. 78 in., w. 53 in. This picture was taken from the Royal Palace, Madrid, during the Peninsular War, by the French General Desolle, whose daughter sold it to Woodburn, a well-known London dealer. He in turn sold it to the King of Holland. At the sale of the King's pictures, August 12, 1850, it was bid in at about $15,480. In 1857 it was sold to W. H. Aspinwall, of New York, at whose death it was sent to London to be sold, where it was purchased for the Detroit Museum. A wood engraving of it appeared in Harper's Weekly, June 30, 1858. It is No. 84 in Charles B. Curtis's catalogue of the works of Murillo, page 132.

ARTS AND CRAFTS

(CONTEMPORARY)

CERAMICS.

316. Group of BINNS POTTERY.

4 Pieces, American Stoneware or Grès, made by Professor Charles F. Binns, Director of the New York State School of Clayworking and Ceramics at Alfred, New York. Professor Binns began the study of this type of ware about 1903 as a matter of personal interest. Every piece is made and finished throughout by Professor Binns himself, and none is duplicated. The production of stoneware was begun in Flanders in the XVI Century and towards the end of the XIX Century some artist potters in France took up the development of the ware, naming it Grès. The original glazing by salt was not entirely abandoned, but was supplemented by colored and mat glazes. Stoneware clays are more elemental than those used for porcelain. The raw material is not purified and only ordinary manipulations are employed in mixing. Thus stoneware possesses the masculine characteristics, strength and virility, while porcelain displays those of the feminine, delicacy and grace. Stoneware and porcelain are produced by the same essential processes; the ware is once-fired, that is, both body and glaze are matured at one and the same burning, the temperature ranging from 1350 to 1400 degrees Centigrade.

Presented by Mr. George G. Booth, 1919.

317. Group of DURANT POTTERY.

7 Pieces made by the Durant Kilns, established in 1911 at Bedford Village, New York, by Jeanne Durant Rice and Leon Volkmar. It attempts to recreate the beauty of rare examples of the potter's art that have come down from the best periods. The Persian blue, aubergine and Chinese yellow glazes, in which the Durant Kilns have been especially successful, are represented.

Presented by Mr. George G. Booth, 1919.

318. Group of PEWABIC POTTERY.

17 Pieces developed by Mrs. William B. Stratton (Miss Mary Chase Perry) and Horace James Caulkins in Detroit. The product is the result of a series of progressive experiments since 1903, the aim being to produce glazes of a type comparable to the best period of ceramic art.

Loaned by the Pewabic Pottery.

320. Group of ROBINEAU PORCELAINS.

36 Pieces made by Mrs. Adelaide Alsop Robineau The hard porcelain body thrown on the potter's wheel is of native materials glazed with mat, semi-mat or crystalline glazes and fired at 2400 degrees Fahrenheit. Color glazes are applied in successive heavy coats at a high point of firing, and being extremely sensitive to the condition of the kiln atmosphere, the results are often disappointing, and the really fine pieces are rare. A variety of crystalline vases of great beauty and carved and modeled vases with designs incised or modeled in the paste, two phases of her work in which Mrs. Robineau is preëminent, are represented.
